Nonfiction text features can be invaluable to early readers in deciphering and understanding new or unfamiliar content. In this beautifully illustrated map reading worksheet, children study a map containing familiar landmarks — like trees, buildings, and streets — to answer comprehension questions. Display the cover of You Can Do It!, and let students know that today's lesson will be focused on describing a character from the story named Linden.; Begin reading the story aloud, and pause halfway through. Display the character trait graphic organizer. As a class, fill out one of the sectors of the chart using what you've learned about Linden thus far. For example, you could say that he's ...Reviewed by Debra Hydorn, Professor of Mathematics, University of Mary Washington on 5/21/18. The text includes the usual topics for a one-semester course in the same order as many introductory statistics texts.
